Organization

Take the opportunity on #GivingTuesday 2019 to support research on cancer prevention

Donate to the International Agency for Research on Cancer (IARC) to increase the impact of its global projects!

DONATE NOW

For example, donating to IARC's projects enables you to...

Global Initiative for Cancer

PRECAMA Project

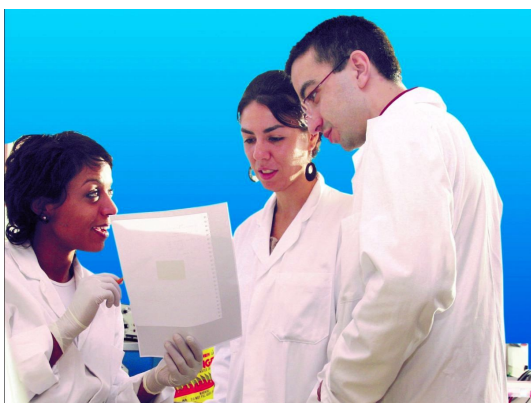

Registry Development

... share knowledge for cancer control by supporting a new generation of local leaders and developing education materials to ultimately save lives worldwide.

BCNet Project

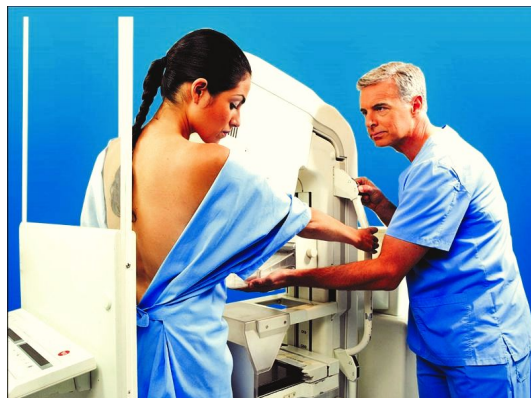

... strengthen the global knowledge and practices on biobanking, by creating infrastructure for cancer research across the world.

Postdoctoral Fellowships Programme

... contribute to the training of bright young researchers from low- and middle-income countries who will discover ways to prevent and manage cancer in their countries and train other researchers.

... support the identification of modifiable risk factors for breast cancer incidence and survival in young women in five countries in Latin America.

CanScreen5 Project

... improve the quality of cancer screening practices worldwide through more effective programme management and supervision.

ESTAMPA Project

... contribute to evaluate cervical cancer screening using HPV in Latin America by helping the ESTAMPA team which provides scientific support, technical training, and some of the resources to screen 50 000 women, 30 to 64 years old in nine countries.

DONATE NOW

Unconditional donations are listed in an IARC Governing Council document, which is published online.

The International Agency for Research on Cancer \(IARC\) is the specialized cancer agency of the World Health Organization. The objective of IARC is to promote international collaboration in cancer research. Your financial contribution will help us to build and strengthen our research activities. Ultimately, together we can understand cancer better and ensure that it is prevented, detected, and treated as early and as effectively as possible.

GivingTuesday is a day when people around the world come together to give back. What started as a day in the USA has quickly grown into a worldwide celebration of generosity and our shared capacity to give.
